Hey! It is so important that when you sit to practice IELTS writing, you only use questions that are "genuine". This means using both questions coming from the IELTS Cambridge 1 & 2 "15 or those that have been created by a writer of exams such as those in my 100 IELTS discussion blog post. However, many students love to practice recent questions about the IELTS essay, namely arguments that have been reported by recent test-takers. I understand why students want to do this & "to know what the recent questions of IELTS sages are and verify that you can answer it is reassuring. However, unfortunately, the test-takers rarely (if ever) are able to accurately remember the formulation of the demand they had in their test. Do you remember the general topic? Of course. Do you remember exact words? Definitely no! Unfortunately, even change a word in a test can change the fire of a question and, therefore, make it impossible to answer! So, every month, I collect 50 questions of sage recent IELTS from students in My Ielts Classroom, and changes so they are the closer to perfect possible. Furthermore, I share the questions in academic and general training (so you can be sure that you are facing the right kind of questions) and I highlighted the main topic of each question for you. This page is updated monthly and now shows the questions from 2021. If you want to see the exam questions that appeared before in 2021, then you can look at our Archive 2021. As always, these questions are provided so you can check out You have ideas for NW topics. Bonus á € "Practicing team sports at school can teach students a series of lessons that are useful outside sport. What values can students learn from playing team sports? How can these values apply in the future? What are the current GT writing trends? Until this year, I noticed two main trends for recent IELTS wise applications for general training students. First, we continue to be questions more than 2 parts than in the academic test, and the arguments seem to be more and more different. Moreover, test writers seem to make small changes to the formulation of questions, which do not actually change what is expected to do, but they can confuse some students. For example, in the past, they have always asked you á € œThe a positive or negative trend? Á € but the same question has recently been formulated as: is a good thing or a bad thing? Do you think it's right or wrong? Do you think this is a good or bad use of public money? If you enter the exams room and you feel confused by the question, my advice is always to answer simply to the question that has been given to you. Yes, there are types of questions that are repeated, but if you are given a direct wise question or a type of question that is unknown, simply focusing on the answer to the question / who has been given to you clearly is always the Best approach!
